Shopping in department stores

Department stores in the United States are very large. They're called department stores because they have many different departments. For example, you can buy dresses, blouses, and skirts in the Women's Clothing Department. You can buy suits, shirts, and ties in the Men's Clothing Department. Parents can buy clothing for their children in the Children's Clothing Department. And shoes, boots, and sneakers are in the Shoe Department.

Most department stores have TVs and computers in their Home Entertainment Departments. Some stores also have Appliance Departments. You can buy refrigerators, stoves, dishwashers, and other appliances there.

Do you want to read a book? Go to the Book Department. Do you want to buy a pair of earrings or a necklace? Go to the Jewelry Department! Do you want to buy some special chocolate? Go to the Candy Department!

There are a lot of other reasons why people shop in department stores. You can buy things at special low prices when department stores have sales. Sometimes stores even have half-price sales!

You can also return things at department stores. Take your receipt to the Customer Service Department, and you can exchange the item or get a refund. In some stores, you can even eat lunch or dinner in a restaurant.

John just wanted to have fun!

John Henderson is a college student in New York City. Last weekend he was supposed to study for an exam, but he didn't really want to study. He just wanted to have fun. On Friday night he went dancing. On Saturday morning he played football with his friend Andrew. On Saturday afternoon his friends called, and they all had a picnic together at the park. On Saturday evening he went to a party at his friend Sandy's house. He went to bed at about midnight.

On Sunday the weather was bad. It was cold and cloudy. It was a good day to study, but John didn't want to. Instead he went to see a movie. The title of the film was Cloudy Monday. John didn't like it all. It was a comedy, and John doesn't like comedies very much.

Finally on Sunday night, John studied for the exam. he studied from six in the evening until two in the morning. On Monday morning John went to school and took the exam. He was tired, and he wasn't at all prepared. Naturally, he did very badly on the exam.

John was sorry he didn't study for the test. He just wanted to have fun!
